

Press Release - For Immediate Distribution

The First of April in the Year 2016

We are pleased to announce that Mr. Fleenor, of Doug Fleenor Design, has, today, received the president's Conductive Metal for valor in the face of unrelenting protocol translations.

A slight disruption of the ceremony occurred when Mr. Fleenor, upon seeing the gold award, uncontrollably blurted out "But silver is a better conductor." Luckily the tape delay automatic gaffe eliminator (aka tape gaffe) corrected the blunder so the television audience heard "Butt sliver is a butter duck".

Mr. Fleenor, also known as Doctor DMX, has been an unwavering proponent of standardizing upon one protocol, DMX (Diversion Means Extinction), although he also supports ASCII and NetFlix.

Previous recipients of the Metal include Nicolai Tesla for adopting the name of a future electric car company and Thomas Edison for inventing the electric light bulb (which he didn't).
